Dear Parents and Students

With holidays here, consider this. Your child has been reunited with you, and as a family, you as parents have the opportunity to celebrate this in whatever manner works for you. The most important part is to have some quality time together. What that looks like for each family will differ, but the key part is being together, interacting, communicating and getting to know one another again. Since the last time you were together your child has had a number of experiences that has helped to shape their lives. Now is the time to catch up on that lost time together. As the old saying goes, "The best gift you can give your child is your time."
